Should it steam for Havana direct it is liable to be met by the fleet of Commodore Schley. now off the Florida coast, under its fullest speed, with Key West as its first point of communication.

It is the probability that if Admiral Cervera, with his fleet, left Curacoa with his direct destination Cienfuegos, he will keep to the South of the Island of Jamaica, and thus avoid Sampson's fleet.

It is an open question with some if Cervera cannot reach Havana before Commodore Schley could reach it. From Curacoa to Havana is 1450 miles. Schley left Charleston Snuday night at 6 o'clock, with 750 is miles between him and Key West. It will take bim 72 bours to reach

Key West. This would bring him ples of pictures taken with this instruthere about I or a c'chek this after- ment. Instruction free. Cameras from HOOD. If the Spanish fleet is heading for of all kinds.

Havana under its strain of greatest pressure it can make 400 miles a day. The course it will probably travel has M'PHERSON'S a Current which naval men say is equal to two knots an hour, But giving it 400 miles a day, and assuming it left Curacoa Sunday night at 6 o'clock, it can cover the 1450 miles in three and a half days. This would put it into Havana tomorrow about noon.

If Sobley reaches Key West at 5 o'clock this afternoon be would still have eighty miles to steam to reach Havana. Under a 10-knot log this would bring him to Havana in eight morning, in time to head off the cuemy's fleet eight or pine hours. In view of such a close race the general conviction is that the Spaulsh fleet is making for Cienforgos. If it is heading for Havana it is taking the chances of meeting Schley and ready to give him battle.

If Admiral Sampson should drop his mouitors and the destination of the Spanish fleet is Cienfuegos it is not improbable the two fleets might come together northwest of the Island of Jamaica this afternoon.

From Cape Haytien, where Sampson was reported Monday, to Cienfuegos is about 650 miles. Il he left there at noon Momlay without the monitors, under a 10-knot log he can reach Cienfnegos on Thursday WAR MAY LAST A YEAR OR MORE morning at 6 o'clock. IMPERIAL CAPRICE. Empress Anna Punished

Empress Anna of Russia in the ast year of her reign carried out one of the most "mighty and magnificent" caprices that ever entered into the head of even a surreme monarch.

Offending Noble.

In 1739 one of her nobles, Prince Golitzin, offended her, and she varied he usual programme, did not send him to Siberia, but instead made him court page and buffoon. He was a widower; the empress commanded him to marry again. The prince carried out her instructions in the spirit of his new profession and selected a girl of low degree.

Her majesty took on herself all the wedding arrangements; the winter of 1739-40 was extraordinarily severe; she ordered a house built entirely of ice; it consisted of two rooms, and all the furniture, even to the bedstead they were fired, too, several times

SYSTEM IN CONVERSATION. Secret of the Transformation in a Bash ful Young Man.

As an overgrown boy-for I was society of the other sex, though greatly attracted to it. I find it difficult to convince my associates of later years that I then habitually sat mute while others chatted. A word or two of remonstrance from my mother had in a single day corrected this during my senlor year, so far as the family table was concerned, and this emboldened me to try the experiment on a wider field. I said to myself, thinking of other young men who made themselves quite agreeable: "These youths sre not your superiors-perhaps in the recitation-room or the playground hardly your equals. Why not cope with them elsewhere?" Thus influenced, I conquered myself in a single evening and lost my shynese forever. The process was unique, so far as I know, and I have often recommended it to shy young men. Being invited to a small party, I considered beforehand what young ladies would had, of course, something in common kinship, or neighborhood, or favorite pursuit. This would do, I reasoned, for a starting point. So I put down on a small sheet of paper what I would say to each, if I happened to be mear merly engineer at the ice factory, has her. ILLEGIBLE WRITING.

The Chirography of Many Famous Mes of Letters. It is the perversity of human nature that people who ought to do one thing do a other. Men who write a legible hand (no one can accomplish more that that now) will use a typewriter, and others, who ought never to be trusted with a pen, order them by the gross and take the discount. Also a clussic is the tale of Macready's admission ticket being solemnly made up by the apothecary into a cough mixture, "To be taken three times a day." The name of Horace Greeley has, in this connection, to be mentioned with a chastened respect. He, undoubtedly, was the great master of illegibility. It was of him the compositor averred that if Belshazzar had seen his handwriting on the wall he would have had cause to on the wall he would have had cause to be terrified. A common story attributed to Greeley belongs, however, to one Brooks, some time president of the New York Central railroad. It ls best, in all things, to be just. And Greeley can well spare it. HURRAH FOR THE CHAMPION HEATER

How dear to my heart is our snug little bathroom Our refuge from sickness, discomfort or dust; Its marbles, its nickel, its neat-painted flooring, So shiny and free from all foulness and rust.

But the best thing there is within that enclosure, The object that pleases us most of them all. That soonest can warm us when chilled by exposure,

Is the good Champion heater that stands by the wall; The Champion gas heater, the nickel-plate heater, The nice, handy heater, so shiny and tali.

When the fires are all out and the children awake me, With coughs or with croup, at once, with ail speed,

To light up the heater I straightway betake me, And find it is always a good friend indeed. For laundry, for sickroom-most all pain relieving-For milk that is malted, beef extract or tea.
